

Public Health Operations in Emergencies for National Strengthening in the Indo-Pacific (PHOENIX)

National Critical Care and Trauma Response Centre

The National Critical Care and Trauma Response Centre's PHOENIX program strengthens pandemic preparedness and outbreak response systems and capacity across 22 countries in the Indo-Pacific. This multi-national program is a component of the Australian Government's Partnerships for a Healthy Region initiative.

Program focus areas

- Health systems strengthening:
 - coordination and leadership
 - public health emergency workforce capability
 - tailored system-strengthening activities aligned to country needs
- Regional and country collaboration
- Inclusive, equitable and climate-conscious emergency preparedness

How we work

PHOENIX supports countries to translate preparedness into action through:

- Education and training
- Communities of practice and mentorship
- Technical support
- Partnerships with national and regional organisations

End of program outcomes

National health workforces have enhanced capacity to respond to public health emergencies

National public health emergency systems have strengthened coordination and integration

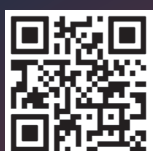

Regional networks and communities of practice are strengthened to enhance public health emergency responses

National health workforces have enhanced ability to address outcomes for women, people with a disability and people from marginalised groups during public health emergency responses
